Local man sought in Broderick killing

By Steve Marschke

Police are searching for a 25-year old West Sacramento man after a shooting death Sunday evening near 4th and C streets in the Broderick neighborhood.

The incident occurred about 7:45 p.m., and left 21-year old Michael Villescaz of West Sacramento dead from a gunshot wound to the back. Sgt. Rick Mayoral of the West Sacramento Police Department said that the incident did not appear to be gang-related, but did involve "bad blood" between two groups of three men in their 20s.

"Three subjects walked to that area and approached two kids who lived in that area," he explained. "An altercation began. A sixth subject -- possibly a brother of the two who lived there -- came into the picture and had a gun. He fired at one of the three subjects who had walked into the area and missed, fired at the victim and missed, and fired again as the victim ran away."

This shot hit Villescaz in the back. Villescaz ran a short distance farther and collapsed. He was pronounced dead on arrival after being taken to a Sacramento hospital.

Mayoral said "there have been some words exchanged" by the two groups of men in the past.

The man wanted for questioning is 25-year old Javier Estrada of West Sacramento. Estrada, a Hispanic, has brown hair and eyes, stands 5' 10' tall and weighs about 180 lbs.

Police believe the weapon used was a revolver.

Anyone with information is asked to call Sgt. Mayoral or Detective Marshall at 373-5870.

Chased, caught

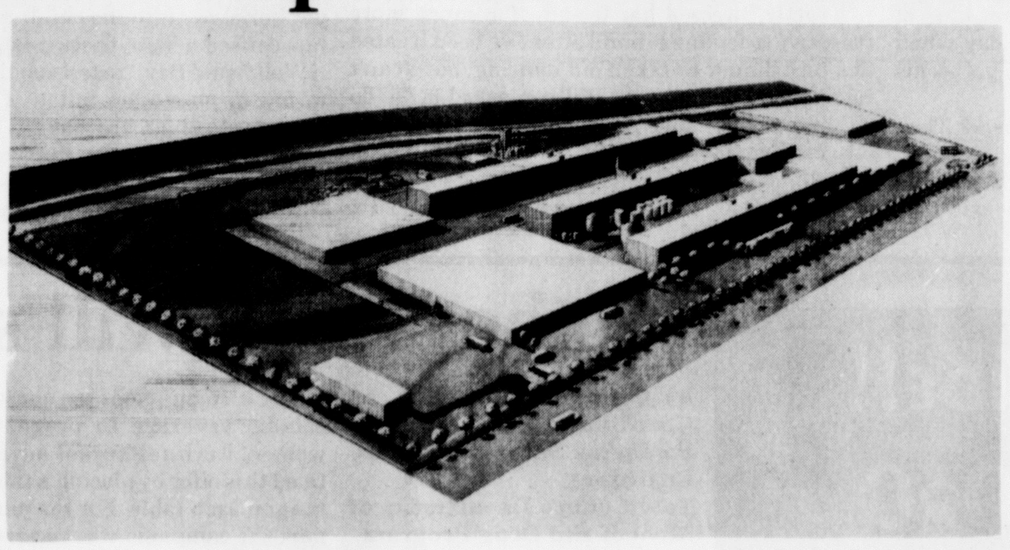
A high-speed chase initiated in Sacramento's south area ended up with a minor collision and three suspects under arrest near the west end of West Capitol Avenue in West Sacramento Monday night.

"About 1:00 a.m., we got a call to assist Sacramento Police Department on a vehicle pursuit," said Sgt. Ray Hensley of the West Sacramento Police Department. "The pursuit ended when a citizen crashed into the suspect vehicle."

A Sacramento K-9 unit as well as two other Sacramento P.D. units, a Sacramento sheriff's department helicopter and several West Sacramento police cruisers were involved in the chase, which ended near Enterprise Blvd. and West Capitol. The entire affair lasted about 15-20 minutes.

Paper plant: in operation in '96 at the earliest

■ Water quality issues expected to be up for debate in November; backers see no link to current controversy over West Sacramento's sewage treatment program



By Steve Marschke

Studies on wastewater output are taking longer than expected, and proponents of the $1 billion proposed West Sacramento newspaper recycling plant are not expecting completion of the facility until 1996, at the earliest.

Al Chmelauskas, the director of environmental services for the Canadian firm MacMillan Bloedel -- one of the two partners in the project -- said Tuesday that the plant's discharge levels of metals such as copper, zinc, lead and iron have required further study.

"We're in water testing right now," he said. "We're using (the samples from Germany) to chart what this plant will be producing."

Meanwhile, the city of West Sacramento is continuing to analyze the future sewage composition of Southport, its southern half. A planned new sewage treatment plant is expected to serve both the paper plant and the Southport region, and then is expected to take over service for the whole city of West Sacramento.

Chmlauskas said that controversy surrounding the operation of West Sacramento's current treatment plant on South River Road has not bearing on whether the paper plant should be built.

"Of course, we won't be part of the current treatment plant," he remarked.

The paper plant -- one of the largest of its kind in the world -- has met with environmental challenges due to concern of its impacts on local air and water. But it has received local approval and a regional air quality permit, and remains planned for part of the 670-acre Southport Industrial Park near the Port of Sacramento.

A lawsuit filed by the Sacramento Valley Toxics Campaign and several other groups and individuals resulted in a lawsuit settlement that trimmed the plant's final size by one-third. But the group has warned that it will be watching the potential impacts of the paper plant's wastewater discharge very closely, and could challenge its construction again over the issue of water pollution.

Meanwhile, Chmelauskas said that prices for recycled newsprint are still too low to support construction of the new plant anway.

"Prices are about $500 per ton," he said. "We need to see prices firming up, and we need to see a trend line up to $600 per ton by the time we go into production. It will take us about two years to build the plant, and we're probably nine months to a year from getting a determination."

Chmelauskas said he was aware of the water quality concerns and expected that there would be a lot of discussion on that issue when the first studies on the new sewage treatment plant are released. The draft environmental impact report for the new sewage treatment plant will include information on what the treated waste from the proposed paper plant will include.

That study, said Stephen Patek, who heads the city's community development department, is due out sometime around November of this year.

390-acre Yolo refuge created

It took five years to transfer wetlands from one government agency to another. The result is a wildlife refuge.

Five years after the idea was first proposed, 390 acres of state-owned property in the Yolo Bypass was transferred on April 22 from Caltrans to the Department of Fish and Game for wildlife habitat.

"Simply transferring unused, surplus property from one state agency and to another proved to be a much greater task than I expected," said Assemblyman Tom Hannigan (D-Solano/Yolo).

Roger Scoonover, a fish and game biologist from Woodland, suggested to Hannigan in 1989 that the narrow strip of Caltrans property located between the Southern Pacific railroad tracks and the I-80/Yolo Causeway be transferred to fish and game for inclusion in the Yolo Basin Wildlife area.

Hannigan authored ACR 117 in 1990 requesting Caltrans to transfer the property to fish and game, a request which was largely ignored until the same language was included in SB 494 (Kelley) last year. The bill mandated the transfer to occur by January 1, 1994.

According to Hannigan, the entire 390 acre property is susceptible to flooding and is recognized as valuable habitat and wetlands within the Pacific Flyway.

The westerly 182 acres of the property will be included within the Yolo Basin Wetlands project, the federally authorized environmentally restoration project sponsored by the state department of fish and game and the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

Under the transfer agreement, the easterly 208 acres will be used for agriculture and a Caltrans borrow site for 25 years, at which time fish and game plans to restore it for wetland habitat and public recreation.

Colleen Kempton loses her fight

The miracle never came for Colleen Kempton, the West Sacramento five-year old who was diagnosed with a brain stem tumor last October.

Colleen died at 9:30 a.m. on Sunday, after a valiant fight and the support of her family and the West Sacramento community.

"She went into the hospital on Saturday night and they wanted to put her on life support," said Jennifer Gereghty, a friend of the family. The family declined to do so.

A magnetic resonance imaging test had showed "nothing but tumor" in Colleen's head shortly before.

A pre-school teacher of Colleen's was with the girl at her time of death. The family of Pat and Sue Kempton was with their other daughter, Marguerite, who was participating in her first communion service at West Sacramento's Our Lady of Grace Church when they were notified that Colleen had died.

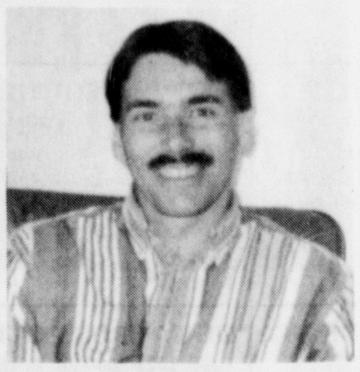
The entire illness had been an ordeal for the Kempton family, who at first saw a period of great hope when their daughter began experimental treatment against the tumor. But those hopes were gradually dashed in recent weeks as Colleen's remission against the tumor gradually faded.

Appeals to the community raised several thousand dollars to help the Kemptons in their travels to obtain medical treatment for Colleen.

Sportswriter with local roots

by Elizabeth Abess

If you could do anything, what would be your dream job? A doctor...lawyer...accountant...maybe a sportswriter, where you get paid to travel all over and watch sports and meet the hottest athletes of the day? Well...meet Don Bosley, currently a senior sports staff writer for the Sacramento Bee. Previously, however, a sportswriter for the News-Ledger and the Green Sheet, and editor of the River City High School newspaper.



Don was born in Sacramento, but came to live in West Sacramento twenty years ago — he was eleven years old. His sportswriting career originated with his interest in sports, while attending River City High School. He "ended up" on the school newspaper following another student, Steve Nishimura, who then worked for the News-Ledger and who is two years older than Don. Steve groomed Don to take over reporting the school sportswriting; Steve went to work for the Sacramento Bee.

After graduating from high school, Don found that while he still loved sports, he came to really love the writing. "At that point I was hooked by the whole aspect of writing, in any form. To this day, there's still nothing that I want to do more than just get out there and write." And write he does, at home, at the Bee, or on the road.

Don was hired by the Bee right out of high school; he was only 18 years old. (While at the Bee he went to college at Sacramento City College and California State University, Sacramento.) He then worked the phones and covered high school games. Then, in 1983, he became a part-time staff writer. The position became full time in 1984. Now he's a senior staff writer.

Bosley credits writing for the school paper and for the News-Ledger with a major role in landing his sportswriting career.

"When I graduated from high school, I already had two years of clippings from the News-Ledger," he commented.

Perhaps you've seen his byline in the Bee. Although he's been involved in different areas, currently he's responsible for all college football and he covered college basketball this past season as well. He's also required to do miscellaneous assignments (he'll be covering the World Cup this summer) and "take-out pieces" (which are long feature stories).

While it sounds like a wonder-

Raider 'Renaissance' students win gold medal at conservation contest

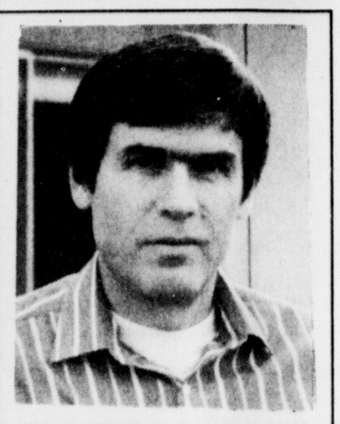
from River City High School

River City High School's Renaissance students took first prize Friday in the junior/senior high school category at the California Department of Conservation's Plastic Petting Zoo and Competition featuring animals made entirely from recyclable soda bottles (called "PET" or polyethylene terephthalate). River City's entry in the Earth Day Conservation Fair competition held at the State Capitol was "Voracious Vulture, Nature's Recycler."

Renaissance is River City's incentive program that rewards students for scholarship and citizenship and community service. Voracious Vulture's creators will receive a pizza party and t-shirts for their creative environmental efforts.

A confession of eavesdropping which you can enjoy, too

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Have you ever been out to lunch or dinner and been seated close enough to someone else's table to overhear them talking? Worse yet, was the private conversation you weren't supposed to be listening to more interesting than the one you were having? Well, as much as I hate to admit it, something like that happened to me awhile back. I was having lunch with a friend at a crowded downtown Chinese restaurant on J Street and seated only a few feet away from me were these two very nicely dressed middle-aged women, both of whom were sporting large diamond wedding rings on their fingers.

I, of course, made every effort not to eavesdrop on them, but unfortunately, my ears refused to tune them out. In fact, i tried so hard not to hear what they were saying that I suffered from ear strain for days afterwards. Anyway, their conversation went something like this:

"I honestly don't know what has got into William lately," said the woman with the biggest diamond ring. "Last night I just about threw myself at him and he didn't even roll over."

"At least you're still interested in that kind of stuff," said her friend. "I live for the day when John takes up golfing or something to get in his exercise."

"You're just awful, Bev," said her friend. They both laughed.

"I wonder why is it," said Bev, "that relatively bright, fully grown men can't figure out that making love is something women want to do AFTER we've had a good time — not something we want to do FOR a good time?"

"Exactly," agreed her friend. "I'm much more receptive to fooling around after I've been treated to a nice dinner or taken out dancing, but I can't remember that last time William asked me to do either one. We just don't seem to enjoy each other's company anymore."

"Well, love, a lot of that is just the age he's at," explained Bev. "John started acting all weird a few years back, too, but he came out of it."

"Really? What'd he do?"

"He bought himself a brand new Porsche, collected half-a-dozen speeding tickets, and got it all out of his system."

"So, that's your advice? Buy William a new Porsche?"

They both laughed again and Bev suddenly seemed to notice that her next door neighbor — me — was just about to fall out of his chair trying to overhear her conversation. She gave me a dirty look, leaned over her table closer to her friend and lowered her voice. I slyly made like I could have cared less about what she was saying and opened my ears even wider.

The next time I could clearly understand what they were saying, Bev's friend was asking her if she had ever met her husband's mother. "No," answered Bev.

"Really? I thought you had. Anyway, she's a big part of the problem. She spoiled William rotten when he was young and I've been bearing that cross ever since. I've absolutely refused to let her get her claws into the children, though, and that has caused a lot of friction lately."

"Well," said Bev, "to tell you the truth — mother-in-law or no mother-in-law, I'll gladly trade you John for William any day."

"Will you throw in the Porsche?" asked her friend. They laughed again — and so did I.

"What's so funny?" asked my lunch companion, looking up from his plate of vegetable chow mein.

"Oh, nothing," I said, pretending that a little piece of my shrimp a la szechuan had gone down the wrong way.

"If you two are having trouble now," continued Bev, "what are you going to do when the kids leave? It's not too far off, you know."

"I know," agreed her friend, "and I've thought a lot about that lately. I think the first thing I'll do is insist that we travel. Do you know I haven't been out of this state in ten years?"

"You're kidding?" asked Bev in disbelief.

"No, I'm serious. William is a real home body. He plops down on the sofa and watches one stupid ball game after another."

"Don't you just hate that?" asked Bev. "John and his damn 49ers. You'd think he was a member of the squad the way he carries on during football season."

"Men just don't have a clue, do they?" asked Bev's friend.

"Love," said Bev, "they're all a pain in the butt, and do you realize that I will have put up with John for twenty-five years come the 12th of next month?"

"Really?" asked her friend, suddenly genuinely happy for Bev. "Well, congratulations! I didn't realize your silver anniversary was just around the corner. Twenty-five years. Isn't that wonderful!"

Mother's Day will support pre-natal care

by May Jo Bryan,
Coordinator
Perinatal Substance Abuse Coalition
Yolo County Department of Alcohol and Drug Program

On Sunday, May 8, we celebrate Mother's Day. A day on which many of us go out to breakfast or dinner to celebrate and to give the mothers in our lives a well-deserved break.

Over the past three years, many Yolo County restaurants have participated in a special Mother's Day campaign to raise the public's awareness regarding the risk of alcohol and drug use during pregnancy.

During the 1993 campaign, 24 restaurants participated throughout Yolo County by offering a complimentary non-alcoholic beverage to pregnant women. Each restaurant advertised this offer by placing a table tent on each table. For the most part the campaign was received enthusiastically by the restaurants' management. The number of participating restaurants doubled from 1991 to 1993.

However, last year one restaurant who had previously participated declined to support the campaign because "they didn't want to embarrass pregnant women who wanted to have a drink." So even though considerable progress has been made within the past few years with regards to educating women and the public, more is needed.

Mother's Day is an appropriate holiday to remind us that alcohol and other drug-related birth defects continue to be a serious concern. Based upon a recent statewide study 17.54 percent of women who were admitted for delivery to hospital in the counties surrounding Sacramento tested positive for alcohol and drugs. This was the highest rate in California and alcohol played a major part in this high ranking.

According to the National Council of Alcoholism, each year at least 5,000 babies are born with birth defects or mental retardation caused by their mothers' use of alcohol during pregnancy.

No one knows for sure how much alcohol it takes to cause these problems, but there is some evidence that even as little as one drink per day during pregnancy can cause the baby to have learning disabilities and reduced IQ in later life. It is important to remember that alcohol, drugs, whether prescription or illicit, and tobacco enter the baby's bloodstream and also can pass to the infant through breast milk.

This year's campaign will include a request for the restaurant to provide a complimentary non-alcoholic beverage and a smoke-free environment. The 1994 participating restaurants will be included in a future press release.

Support these restaurants and acknowledge their committment to promote this message to our community.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The San Francisco 49ers struck gold in the college draft.

The 49ers traded their first pick (15th pick overall) and a second and third round selection to the Rams for the seventh pick overall in the draft and selected Notre Dame defensive tackle Bryant Young, a 6' 2", 276-pounder, recorded 67 tackles and 6 1/2 sacks in helping the Irish to a No. 2 ranking.

The 49ers had another first round choice (28th) pick overall), and they selected the top rated fullback in the draft, Florida State's William floyd.

The selection of the 6-1, 242 pound junior fullback means that the 49ers will not sign Tom Rathman for another season. Cal kicker Doug Brien, a third round pick, is projected as the replacement for Mike Cofer. The 49ers also addressed their depth problems at wide receiver by taking Tennessee's Cory Fleming.

Steve Bono is still the key figure to the money game. To actually sign their picks, the 49ers will need roughly another $1.5 million. Which leaves no money to sign other players. More cuts are expected!!

The Sacramento Kings finished their season with a win over the Golden State Warriors last Sunday, but that victory may have cost them a lottery pick in next month's college draft. The Kings tied with the L.A. Clippers and will have a coin flip decide which team will get a better draft choice in the lottery.

Playoffs start this weekend, so prepare for another month of NBA basketball!!

The Oakland A's lost seven games in a row on the road and, if you can believe it, are still only a half-game out of first place!

The A's pitching staff has blown seven leads of three runs or more. Eckersley has blown all three save opportunities this season.

The Giants remain in first place in their division, but the bats have been real quiet. The pitching staff's 3.03 E.R.A. is second only to the Braves.

The Giants travel to Montreal, Philly and NY this weekend, while the A's host the Red Sox and NY Yankees.

See ya next week!!

ful life, it can get pretty hectic. On "Game Day," for example, Don can leave home at 6:30 a.m. to go to the Bee, leave Sacramento by 8:00 and arrive at, say, Stanford by 10:00 or so.

He spends a couple of hours "preparing" before the game; spends several hours watching the game, and another hour interviewing the athletes, coaches, etc. after the game. He must then write and "file" his story (via computer) by 9:15 p.m. and drive home. (Hectic or not, it sounds pretty fun, doesn't it?)

Don cautions, however, that while his original attraction was sports, he's found that would-be sportswriters don't make it unless they love to write. Yes, he knows Bill Walsh and has met Shaquille O'Neal, but, he says, "You would never stay in this job because you get to rub elbows with great athletes, that's not enough of an attraction. It really does wear off after a while."

But Don does love to write. And he does it very well. In fact, he won an award for Top Ten Feature Story of 1992; this is an Associated Press Sports Editors Award (which is a highly recognized award in the newspaper industry).

If the actual writing is the important part of being a sportswriter, how does one get started? Don recommends that you need to learn and develop mentally — reading is absolutely essential. And, of course, you need to write. And, you can't be afraid to show your writing, since "You'll be horrible before you're good!"...

Take it from experience.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

The value of location for new state office buildings

Joe Serna -- Sacramento's mayor -- made a strong argument for placing all of California's new state office buildings in downtown Sacramento, writing Sunday for the big newspaper across the river.

While avoiding direct criticism of West Sacramento's bid for some of the buildings, he outlined how "hidden costs" might make it impractical for the state to locate some of the offices way out in the suburbs. For example, although cheap land might be available in a place like Rancho Cordova, it might cost the state extra labor and money to provide infrastructure needs to such an outlying location.

Mayor Serna's comments certainly make sense, and if he is suggesting that such items be taken into account during future "bids" for the office buildings, it is a good suggestion. But it remains to be seen whether doing so will put West Sacramento at a strong disadvantage in bidding for the buildings.

One of West Sacramento's main assets as a city is its proximity to Sacramento. If you eat lunch near the boardwalk in Old Sacramento, you can do so while gazing across the river at the shoreline of West Sacramento. You can almost throw a rock across the river from one city to the other!

West Sacramento can offer relatively inexpensive sites for some of the new buildings within walking distance of Sacramento's downtown. And if transportation issues and other issues can be properly addressed, it is only natural that someday it will attract some of the state's new headquarters officers.

This won't be entirely bad for Sacramento, either. Although both cities will no doubt continue to jockey and squabble every time a new office site is up for grabs, the development of each city's downtown will in the long run be good for both. State office employees will cross the (and city boundaries) to shop and eat, wherever attractive opportunities are available.

The downtown planned for West Sacramento's Triangle Area, which will include urban residential development alongside offices and retail, can only help to support businesses across the river. And this local development, in turn, won't start until the planned downtown receives its first anchor tenants -- such as a couple of state office buildings.

In the long run, everybody wins.

Redevelopment agency official responds to criticisms

by Val Toppenberg,
Deputy Director, West Sacramento
Redevelopment Agency

Several questions have arisen in recent weeks about how the redevelopment agency operates and how it undertakes projects. It is important for the public to be informed about the agency's activities to allow active public participation in the consideration of agency projects.

First, the redevelopment agency is committed to a public process. This means that projects, programs and activities are reviewed with affected neighborhoods as early as possible. Next, the various city boards and commissions, including the economic development advisory commission, the housing advisory commission, the planning commission, or another of the eight boards or commissions appointed by the city council, are consulted for advice or recommendations. Finally, the city council will consider a project in public session. In addition to these steps, additional public meetings are often held to inform the public and to obtain input from the community. This kind of public participation process was conducted during the planning of the Holly Courts apartments, the development of the triangle specific plan, and is currently being done by a task force on the overall economic development strategy for the city.

One critic has suggested that the redevelopment agency has deliberately distorted information in an effort to mislead the community. Nothing could be further from the truth. Full information about redevelopment agency projects and activi-

Wastewater treatment plant:

Some employees concerned about bacteria testing

■ A state official says procedures used in testing for bacteria in West Sacramento's sewage discharge "definitely would not" meet state requirements, if descriptions made by some of the sewer plant's staff are accurate.

by Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Several staff members at West Sacramento's wastewater treatment plant say it is their routine procedure to perform state-mandated bacteria tests in what might be an illegal way.

They test for bacteria only after making sure their samples will pass the test. Specifically, say the Sewage plant procedures: who was in the loop?

Workers at West Sacramento's sewage treatment plant, as we learned last week, have been distorting results from their quality control tests for some time. From the testimony of the workers, it seems likely that an attempt was being made to cover up the fact that the plant wasn't working well.

Inadequately treated sewage was being discharged into the Sacramento River, and this wasobvious to the people at the bottom of the totem pole in the plant.

But how could such a thing go on without anyone in a supervisory position knowing about it? How could supervisors and managers at the plant be oblivious to a procedure that deliberately camouflaged a chronic problem?

Managers who talked to the News-Ledger said they were aghast at the testimony from their underlings, who had told this newspaper it was their policy only to test the quality of the plant's treated wastes after first making sure the samples they chose would meet required standards.

It doesn't seem likely that all the managers could be telling the truth. It's hard to believe that common, long-term procedures were used at the plant in complete secrecy from supervisors and managers. And it's questionable whether the plant operators would jeopardize their licenses by creating the flawed procedures themselves, without at least an approving nod from a superior.

> Inadequately treated sewage was being discharged into the Sacramento River, and this was obvious to the people at the bottom of the totem pole at the sewage treatment plant.

What about the "disgruntled employee" theory? Is the whole story just the fantasy of an unhappy employee or two, as has been suggested by several people in the department's management?

That's not likely either. Too many of the plant's staff independently confirmed the facts in question. And all of them refused an opportunity to blame anyone above for the plant's unofficial policy of "pre-testing" bacteria samples. Disgruntled employees are mad at their bosses - why would some of them give out information that might jeopardize their own wastewater treatment license without bothering to incriminate management? What's in it for them?

No, it seems likely that the employees were telling the truth. And it seems likely that someone on some level in the chain of command at the plant knew about it.

Meanwhile, many hours per week, the sewage plant has probably been putting wastewater in the material that exceeded state and federal allowances for bacteria and fecal matter. (Two surprise tests by a state regulator before the story broke each showed this. The sewage samples he took contained an illegally high count of a bacteria linked to the presence of fecal matter.)

Maybe now that the news is out, the proper equipment and procedures will be brought together to cure this problem at the plant, and that's good. A city investigation of the problem would serve little purpose, since few of the plant's operators are likely to say anything that might get their bosses in trouble with their bosses. But isn't anyone at the state or federal level curious about who's to blame for a fraudulent procedure? And whether they ought to continue to be employed, and continue having control over what West Sacramento dumps into a river?

That remains to be ...

ties is available to any citizen upon request. There is no "hidden information" or secret documents.

Minutes and audio tapes of redevelopment agency meetings are available to anyone upon request. In addition, meeting are broadcast weekly on Sonic Cable and the city will arrange for other media for those with special needs.

It has been stated that money allocated for making West Capitol Avenue more attractive will be spent on statues to be placed at each end of West Capitol. The statement is false. A consultant hired by the redevelopment agency in 1992 recommended that the agency undertake a program of street tree planting and "gateway" improvements along the key entry streets to West Captiol Avenue including Enterprise, Harbor and Jefferson Boulevards (tree planting, lighting and signage). No statues were proposed and no statues have been funded. It was further stated that the redevelopment agency recently appointed a design firm to redo both ends of West Capitol Avenue, to be finished sometime around the year 2000. No design firms have been appointed by the redevelopment agency or city council to do such work.

It was suggested that "block grants" devalue property. The redevelopment agency applies for, and has successfully received, funding in recent years through the federal community development block grant program. This program is designed to assist property owners who otherwise could not afford to fix up their property. This program is available to both homeowners and owners of rental property and is designed to address health and safety problems as well as to improve the appearance of homes within targeted areas in the community. Block grants do not devalue property. Rather, they help upgrade and stabilize and ultimately improve the value of property in those targeted neighborhoods.

The redevelopment agency has a legal requirement under state and federal laws to develop and rehabilitate housing. These laws, including various provisions in California community redevelopment law, not only require that the agency build housing, but also proscribe the way in which the agency must undertake such projects. It has been suggested that the redevelopment agency recently erred in allowing a non-profit corporation to develop housing allowing the property to be removed from property tax rolls. Clearly, one of the goals and objectives of the redevelopment agency is to maximize revenues received by the city and agency. With respect to affordable housing developments, however, the paying of property taxes would only cause the required subsidies to the project to be increased. In fact, the housing assistance programs established by state and federal agencies require that these projects be developed by "non-profits."

The non-profit corporations active in West Sacramento include the Community Housing Opportunities Corporation (CHOC) and the West Sacramento Housing Development Corporation (WSHDC). The board of directors of both CHOC and WSHDC serve with no compensation, receiving no salary or any other payments. This question was previously asked at a Maple/Holly steering committee meeting and answered. The housing development corporations do have employees and it is understood that these employees receive a salary.

While some may disagree with the laws and standards established by state and federal governments, the redevelopment agency is a public agency, bound to follow those regulations and carry out its business in conformance with those laws.

Redevelopment agency staff are committed to facilitating an open, public process. Background documents, staff reports and other information about projects and activities is available upon request from the agency. We will continue to provide information and opportunities for the public to participate in agency activities through public workshops, meetings and offical actions.

Letters to the Editor

Heroes

Once again "the good ole boy" network has been discovered and living well in West Sacramento. Thanks to heroes such as John Parent and Jerry Prosser, who have exposed West Sacramento's management philosophy of Greek over the health of its citizens. It's about time someone looks out for the "little guy," not just business interest.

If West Sacramento's managers can't operate its waste treatment plant now, how in the world can it handle billions of tons of waste coming from the projected MacMillan Bloedel newspaper recycling plant? Flush it twice, it's got to go all the way to West Sac!

Holocaust

"Courage to Remember" was the name of the presentation by the U.S. History Honors class at River City High's annual open house on April 19. Guests entered Mrs. Carlisle's classroom, and, in a single file, walked through a maze of hanging posters depicting the Holocaust while others watched a video tape narrated by Orson Wells and Elizabeth Taylor. There was no discussion because the pictures and the narration said it all. I was deeply moved and I know anyone who was there had to have felt something.

I want to thank and applaud Mrs. Carlisle and her class for having the courage to teach and the courage to learn about such a tragic period of world history. It is extremely important to teach such atrocities, not only to our students, but to the entire community in hopes of preventing history repeating itself.

As I left the display, I was handed a piece of paper which said:

The first came for the Communists
and I didn't speak up — because I wasn't a Communist.

Then they came for the Jews
and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew.

Then they came for the trade unionists
and I didn't speak up — because I wasn't a trade unionist.

Then they came for the Catholics
and I didn't speak up — because I was a Protestant.

Then they came for me —
and by that time
no one was left to speak up.

Again, thank you Mrs. Carlisle and thank you to your students...May we never forget.

School board

It's time to get a school board that works together and stop all the antagonism, criticism, and arguements. We lost three good board members when we lost Brooks, Fisher and Knox and superintendent Del Alberti. It's time that the residents get out and vote out the incumbents and get a board that can work together and get along. I have met a lot of teachers and they do not deserve to be criticized, as a lot of them are expected to be babysitters and teach also. Elect a board that works together for the welfare of the students and more cooperation from the parents, and keep the politics out of the meetings. Good luck to David Miller.

YoloBus

In last week's letter I noted April 29 as the YoloBus meeting day to discuss some dramatic proposed changes in bus service. The meeting day is today, April 27 at 10:15 a.m. in the port meeting room, 3rd floor, 2101 Stone Blvd., as noted (correctly) in the handout cover letter. It is hoped that last week's error will not cause anyone to miss today (Wednesday's) meeting. The big problems with the changes remains: 1) Service to city hall cuts off at 5:25 p.m.; 2) Proposed service to/from Southport cuts off around 4 p.m. and 3) No midday or extended service is planned for the Industrial Park area, which includes the Sacramento area's main 24-hour post office and the local social security office, both of which should warrant hourly service. (Bus handouts emphasized the 4/27/94, 10:15 a.m. meeting time...)

On another note, regardless of who is to blame in this local river pollution ordeal, it seems time to change the system so that we treat used oil and anything else being wrongfully and costily dumped like we treat beverage cans, etc.: Charge a deposit upon sale of said items and reward those who dispose of old oil, etc. properly. Put another way, how many would throw away money whereas now they must pay out money (aka: dumping fees)? Time for change with incentives, right?

Finally, the Harbor Blvd. widening project has hit another roadblock: Those affected most directly feel they're getting a bum rap, whether they just want to "maintain the status quo," or they think they should get more for their land which is needed for Harbor Blvd.'s widening. They should remember that once Harbor Blvd. is widened to 5 lanes plus bike lanes, the smaller lots — although still large and deep — will become worth much more money! And just as they redraw congressional districts each decade, why can't those affected have their property lines redrawn, with those who cannot afford such adjustments and assessments given a fair chance to sell (half of?) their lot to their neighbor(s)? The simplest Rx would envision every third lot being split in half and declared part of the larger adjacent...depending who cannot stay for financial or "smaller lot" reasons, the result should be a survival rate of over 50% of current businesses — with an increased compliance with local codes, be they parking, exposures, or whatever.

Pollution

The Sacramento Bee last week carried the news about Auburn's polluting of the Auburn Ravine; this news identifies the real problem which the paper covered last week. Who is to blame for the problems at our treatment plant?

The problem is growth in the Sacramento (and San Joaquin) Valley.

Auburn has approved development without a plan to take care of, among other impacts, sewage. Not mentioned in the article is the probable depletion of the air quality and problems with water supply.

No community in our valley can possibly meet all the requirements for clean air, adequate water supply, and disposal of effluent unless there is a complete plan for the river basin before any further growth is planned.

West Sacramento is dumped on by a Sacramento group because of the fact that some of our effluent is "toxic" from our industry. Sacramento itself dumps untreated waste in the river in times of heavy rain.

For us, the railroad left the track when the old Sanitary District convinced the community that it should not send our effluent to Sacramento for a joint plant: We did not want to have our sewage mixed with Sacramento's. And the residents were asked to pay for a plant sized for growth (Federal and state grants would have been sufficient to cover our current needs and short term growth. This was before Prop. 13 and the concept of development paying its way).

Unless our community goes back to that time, that time when the railroad left the track; evaluates the impacts of in-fill and industry now proceeding; and secures from the regional offices of water quality and resources, and air quality a regional plan, we cannot escape the continuing pressures to develop and to be the whipping boy for problems. The same outside groups that worked to support the paper plant here and in effect make us an industrial city aren't helping us now to meet the costs of such industry.

GRACE K. OHLSON
West Sacramento

Note: Those who point out the consequences of growth in our inland valley (smog, limited water resources, and problems in waste disposal) are dismissed as being anti-growth. A rational solution to allowing development and still maintaining a quality of life consistent with good health cannot be reached by each local community acting without regard to all the other communities.

The cumulative effect of each city and county deciding what it needs in new buildings, new economic development, new housing and industry is that none of us will have a quality of life that is at all healthy. There is only so much water, so much air and as yet no real solution to the disposal of waste. We in the valley act as if we were Balkan countries fighting to get what we want and to heck with the rest of the valley. Unfortunately no one can win, because all of us ultimately breathe the same air and share the same water resources.

Spring pleasures

Last Sunday evening, spring weather conditions no longer offered an excuse to procrastinate about resuming my daily walks; therefore, I donned tennies and started out. My walk began south on Park. Many Park Blvd. homes are neat and well cared for; the greenery is well-manicured — obviously the recipients of time and an appreciation of esthetics. On Park Blvd., all in a row, are several homes which are pleasing to the eye; of note is a large house with blue windows (it has been a landmark for 30+ years): the large dogwood tree in their front yard is a beauty and now is in full bloom. That tree is a wonder every spring!

Continuing south on Park I turned onto Fallbrook and noticed a cul-de-sac I'd always bypassed, so I decided to stroll in that direction before returning home. Fernwood Circle is usually only frequented by those who reside there or those looking for a lost pet or who have missed a turn. Fernwood Circle is abloom! Homes with front yards awash with blooming shrubs, especially camellias and azaleas; homes with pots of blooms on front porches. At the apex of the circle is a modest home with an amazing array of blossoms. Although the camellia has only a very few blossoms hanging-on, I counted no less than 18 different plants, shrubs, and bulbs in bloom; on the east side a bank of cala lilies behind dainty lavender groundcover, next a rose in bud, then across the front coral bells, delphinium, pale lavender-blue pansies, and bright pink and purple-black tulips between and an incredible explosion of pink miniature rhododendrons which are reminiscent of stalks of cotton candy. Under the very, very large and very impressive heritage oak trees are more coral bells, rhododendron, azaleas, lilies, freesias, anemones, petunias, stock, dianthus, incredibly tall spikes of snapdragons and low lying alyssum; not to mention some other smaller and daintier and unidentified blossoms. In front of the garage are bowls overflowing with other spring flowers.

If the two, very large canines had appeared agreeable, I may have been tempted to look more closely into the back yard because I didn't recognize all the blossoms in their territory!

Please publish this letter of appreciation to the folks whose toil has produced such a wondrous array of spring colors and has enhanced my springtime attempts at exertion! What delights can the stroller anticipate this summer?

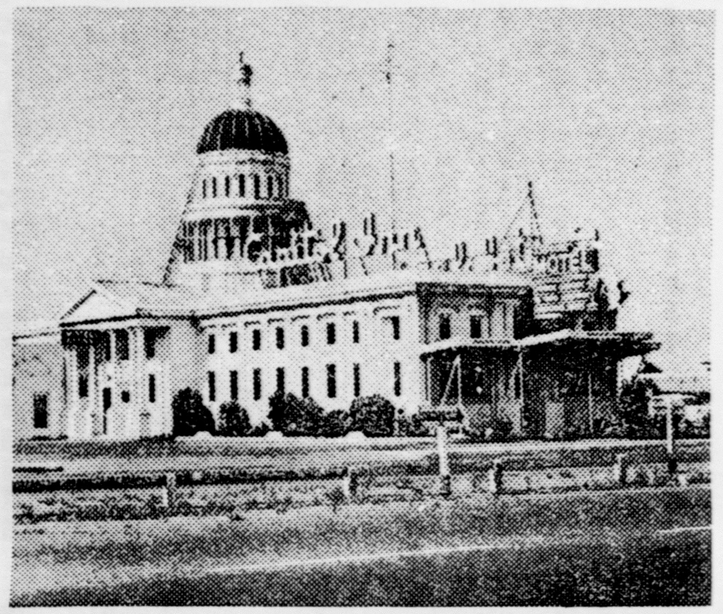
Here's First Issue of Area's Own Local Newspaper

NEWS-LEDGER

VOLUME 1, NUMBER 1 — WEST SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA — WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1964

NEW PAPER LOCALLY OWNED



With this first issue, Eastern Yolo County's only locally owned newspaper makes its debut to readers in West Sacramento, Broderick, Bryte and Clarksburg.

The News-Ledger, a weekly, is the first newspaper ever to be completely produced - edited and printed - in West Sacramento.

More than 3,000 copies of this issue are being distributed free of charge to interested residents, business houses and public offices. A limited number of future issues will also be distributed in this manner, with distribution eventually carried out by mail to paid subscribers.

The current issue was produced by Photo-Offset Lithography on the press of the Scroll 'n Scribe Letter Shop at 824 Merkley Avenue. However, all business activities of the paper are being conducted temporarily at 1501 Madrone Avenue.

Owners and publishers of the new weekly newspaper are Michael P. Garten and Julius Feher, who also are partners in the Letter Shop. Both are residents of West Sacramento.

Feher is serving as Editor.

Subscriptions, at $1 a year, are now being accepted by the News-Ledger at P. O. Box 463, West Sacramento, and by staff members, who may be reached at FRontier 1-8030.

In announcing immediate and future plans for the newspaper, the owners issued the following statement:

"We take considerable pride in presenting this first issue of the News-Ledger to the community, knowing that a completely local newspaper, locally owned and edited, and representing the interests of this community exclusively, has long been needed.

"We are confident that it will win the support both of the residents of the community and the business houses whose advertising will, of necessity, be the paper's only financial support.

"The first few issues will be presented in a form similar to today's edition. However, plans are under way to acquire a conventional newspaper press and other necessary equipment. At that time all of the news-

Plans for remodeling and reopening the restaurant, dining room and bars of the Capitol Inn were revealed this week by Frank Parisi of Sacramento, who announced he has purchased an 80 per cent interest in the establishment.

CAPITOL INN INTEREST SOLD TO FRANK PARISI

The sale of a major interest in the Capitol Inn in West Sacramento was announced this week by Frank Parisi, Sacramento restaurant owner.

Parisi announced he has purchased an 80 percent interest in the establishment from Wong & Chew Enterprises of San Francisco. The San Francisco company retains a 20 percent interest.

At the same time, Parisi, who operates the River Mansion Restaurant near Courtland, announced the owners plan to remodel the inn's restaurant and dining room.

The dining room and bars have been closed about a year, but the motel itself has continued to operate, as has a bottle shop on the premises. The restaurant and bars are expected to reopen in about 90 days.

Parisi said the redecorated restaurant will feature Italian-American food. The swimming pool, which also has been closed for some time, will be reopened and much of the entertainment activity will be centered around it, he added.

No-man's Land Ok'd

Annexation of the so-called "no-man's land" located north of the Washington and Bryte Fire Protection Districts into the Washington Fire District boundaries was approved yesterday by the county's local agency formation commission.

The area, which includes the old Showboat property on the Sacramento River north of Broderick, is not now included in a fire district.

Annexation to the Washington District had already been approved by the county boundary commission.

Further action by the county is required before the annexation becomes official.

$2.08 Yolo Tax Rate Due

A basic county tax rate of $2.08 per $100 of assessed valuation, the same rate in force for the 1963-64 fiscal year, is expected to be adopted Friday by the Yolo County Board of Supervisors.

This was announced yesterday by S. W. (Sam) Combs, supervisor from the first (East Yolo) district, who said all tax rates set by the supervisors ---- including those for the several special district rates affecting property in this area -- are slated to be adopted during the Friday session.

The board also is scheduled to adopt the final budget for operation of the county government for the period which started July 1.

The Board of Supervisors held a regular weekly meeting in Woodland Monday and adjourned that session until 10 a.m. Friday to complete action on the budget and tax rates.

The $2.08 tax rate includes $1.80 for general county expenditures and 28 cents for capital outlay items.

ROTARY VISITOR

Merlin Drucquer, district governor of Rotary International, will be in West Sacramento Friday for his official visit to the West Sacramento Rotary Club.

Drucquer will meet with Merv O'Day, president of the West Sacramento club, and other officers in

21 Candidates Running for 9 Posts

Voters of the East Yolo area's three sanitary districts will go to the polls on Tuesday, September 8, to elect members of the three districts' boards of directors.

It will be the first time elections are held in all three districts at the same time since the districts were formed in the late 1940s. At that time residents of Bryte and Broderick formed their own districts and contracted with the West Sacramento district to use its sewage treatment plant on the Sacramento River.

Recently enacted ordinances regulating the collection of garbage and a report by a citizens' committee appointed by the West Sacramento District Chamber of Commerce recommending consolidation of the three special districts into one unit spurred the present interest in the board posts.

A total of 21 candidates have filed for election to the nine posts to be filled, three in each district.

In the Bryte district, the candidates are D. W. Pillers and Jay L. White, incumbents; George DeMars, David C. Poole, George T. Baker, Richard H. Osgood and Gilford W. Thomas.

In Broderick, those seeking election are P. Wayne Smythe, incumbent; Walter K. Ecklund, Jacob G. Flohr, Edward Nitschke, John L. Pina, Norman Reynolds and Clarence W. Weiss.

The West Sacramento candidates are Carleton B. Rogers and Dennis Sea, incumbents; Earl Clearwater, Alex Creighton, Benjamin D. Minter, Leonard N. Ortiz and Harry F. Sublett.

ESSAYS OF MONTAIGNE

"Of Vanity"

Necessity reconciles men and brings them together. This accidental link afterwards takes the form of laws; for there have been some as savage as any human opinion can produce, which have nevertheless maintained their bodily health and long life as well as those of Plato and Aristotle could do.

And indeed all those imaginary, artificial descriptions of a government prove ridiculous and unfit to put into practice. These great lengthy altercations about the best form of society and the rules most suitable to bind us, are altercations fit only for the exercise of our minds; as in the liberal arts there are several subjects whose essence is discussion and dispute, and which have no life apart from that. Such a description of a government would be applicable in a new world, but we take men already bound and formed to certain customs; we do not create them, like Pyrrha or Cadmus. By whatever means we may have power to correct and reform them, we can hardly twist them out of their accustomed bent without breaking up everything. Solon was asked whether he had established the best laws he could for the Athenians. "Yes, indeed, he answered, "the best they would have accepted."

Not in theory, but in truth, the best and most excellent government for each nation is the one under which it has maintained itself. Its form and essential fitness depend on habit. We are prone to be discontented with the present state of things. But I maintain, nevertheless, that to wish for the government of a few in a democratic state, or another type of government in a monarchy, is foolish and wrong.

Nothing endangers a state except innovation; change alone lends shape to injustice and tyranny. When some part is dislocated, we can prop it up; we can fight against letting the alteration and corruption natural to all things carry us too far from our beginnings and principles. But to undertake to recast so great a mass, to change the foundations of so great a structure, that is a job for those who wipe out a picture in order to clean it, who want to reform defects of detail by universal confusion and cure illnesses by death, who desire not so much to change as to overthrow everything. The world is ill fitted to cure itself; it is so impatient of its affliction that it only aims at getting rid of it, without considering the cost. We see by a thousand examples that it usually cures itself to its own disadvantage. Riddance from a present evil is not cure, unless there is an all-round improvement in condition.

The surgeon's aim is not to kill the diseased flesh; that is only the road to his cure. He looks beyond, to make the natural flesh grow again, and restore the part to its proper condition. Whoever proposes merely to remove what is biting him falls short for good does not necessarily succeed evil; another evil may succeed it, and a worse one, as happened to Caesar's slayers, who cast the Republic into such a state that they had reason to repent of having meddled with it. To many others since, right down to our own times, the same thing has happened. The French could tell you a thing or two about it. All great changes shake the state and throw it into disorder.

INVITATION TO BID

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Director of Community Development, Engineering Division, 1951 South River Road, West Sacramento, California until 12:00 Noon local time on Thursday, May 12, 1994, at which time and place they will be publicly opened and read aloud for:

BRODERICK AREA SEWER IMPROVEMENTS

The proposed work consists of the following:

Description of Work:
Schedule A:

The work consists of furnishing all labor, equipment, and incidentals necessary to complete the work of the "Broderick Sewer Force Main". The work consists of placing, testing, and tieing-in an eighteen (18) inch sanitary sewer force main as shown on the plans, drawings, and specified herein.

In the case that contaminated soil or water is encountered during trench excavation (such as at a previously placed utility line), the contractor shall implement the required measures from the contractor's Health and Safety Plan to provide for worker and public safety. The contaminated material shall be properly handled in accordance with the procedures detailed in Appendix C of the Contract Work Plan and treated on site, if possible, in accordance with applicable regulations. The contractor shall document any readings for contaminated material and immediately notify the City's Project Engineer for verification of quantities of contaminated material.

Schedule B:

Includes work, in addition to schedule A work, consisting of furnishing all labor, materials, equipment and incidentals necessary to install three pipelines. One (1) - four (4) inch perforated PVC well screen and two (2) - four (4) inch solid Schedule 80 PVC pipelines, risers and Cristy boxes.

Bidders shall bid on both schedules. The basis of comparison of bids shall be by evaluation of either bid Schedule A only or bid of Schedule B. The City retains sole discretion whether to award a contract for Schedule A or Schedule B.

The work shall be so performed that upon Contract completion the project shall be ready for use.

Completion of Work: All work shall be completed within twenty (20) days of the date of issuance of the Notice to Proceed.

Obtaining Contract Documents: Plans and specifications may be examined at the office of the Director of Community Development, Engineering Division, 1951 South River Road, West Sacramento, California. A copy of bid documents may be obtained at the office upon request and payment of $15.00 or may be mailed upon request and payment of $20.00. The amount of the payment is non-refundable.

Submission of Proposals: All proposals must be submitted not later than the time prescribed. The bidder is wholly responsible to see that his bid is submitted at the time and place designated for the opening of bids. Any bid received after the time and date specified shall not be considered. Any bid may be withdrawn prior to the scheduled time for opening bids.

Each bid must conform and be responsive to this notice and shall be made on the official proposal forms furnished with the Contract documents.

Attention is directed to the provisions of the Business and Professions Code Section 7028.15 which makes it a misdemeanor for any person without a valid contractor's license (with specific exceptions) to submit a bid to act as a contractor to a public agency.

Proposal Guarantee: Each proposal must be accompanied by cash, a cashier's check, certified check or bid bond, executed on the prescribed form, in an amount not less than ten (10) percent of the total bid price payable to the City of West Sacramento.

Bidders are hereby notified that in accordance with the provisions of Government Code Section 4590, securities may be substituted for any moneys which the City may withhold pursuant to the terms of this Contract to ensure performance.

Construction License: The successful bidder must possess a current Class "A" General Engineering C-34 Pipeline Contractor's License issued by the State of California.

Award: The award shall be made to the lowest responsible bidder whose proposal complies with the specified requirements. The award of Contract will be made by the Director of Community Development, and the Contractor shall execute the Contract within ten (10) days after he has received the Contract from the City.

The City reserves the right to waive any irregularity in the proposals. No bid may be withdrawn for a period of sixty (60) days after the opening of bids.

Rejection of Bids: The right is reserved to reject any and all bids. Any bid not conforming to the intent and purpose of the Contract documents may be rejected. The City reserves the right to make all awards in the best interest of the City.

Disqualification of Bidder: If there is a reason to believe that collusion exists among any bidders, none of the bids of the participants in such collusion will be considered and the City may likewise elect to reject all bids received.

Relief of Bidder: Attention is directed to the provisions of Public Contracts Code Section 5101 and following, concerning relief of bidders and in particular to the requirements therein that if the bidder claims a mistake was made in his bid, the bidder shall give the City written notice, within five (5) days after the opening of bids of the alleged mistake, specifying in the notice, in detail, how the mistake occurred.

Wage Rates: Bidders are hereby notified that the California Director of Industrial Relations has determined the general prevailing rate of wages for each craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute the work.

It shall be mandatory for the Contractor and any subcontractor under him to pay not less than the said specified rates to laborers and workmen employed by them in the execution of the Contract.

Bonds: The successful bidder will be required to furnish a payment bond in an amount equal to one hundred (100) percent of the Contract price, and a faithful performance bond in an amount equal to one hundred (100) percent of the Contract price.

Techiques of conducting oral histories taught by historian

by Virginia Seamans

Do you like people?

Do you find pleasure in listening to tales of the past?

Do you enjoy contact with people older than yourself?

If you answered "yes" to one or more of the above questions you belong at the workshop which is being held this evening in the meeting room of the Turner branch of the Yolo County Library.

By special arrangement, Shipley Walters, whose book "West Sacramento, the Roots of a New City" was published by the Yolo County Historical Society at the time the city incorporated, will be conducting this workshop on techniques for the taking of oral histories.

Please come this evening, April 27, from 6:15 to 8 p.m. to the library to enjoy a unique learning experience along with other people who want to preserve our region's history.
